I Wept a Prayer

Revd Jack Dunion has written this beautiful poem to share with E-Readers:

I Wept a Prayer

In the depths of despair, I wept a prayer

And asked my Lord for bread.

He fed my heart with inner joy,

and this is what He said:

“I have given you this and that,

And given you that and this.

Tell me, what it is you lack

And what it is you miss?”

I realised I have it all and everything I need,

The things I lacked came not from He,

But a thoughtless, ungrateful selfish me

Through heart and word and deed.

In the depths of my despair, I wept aloud,

“My Lord what have I done?”

His gentle voice came soft and sweet

“you only now became my son”.

In that fleeting moment I had glimpsed,

The face of He who is and was

And always He will be.

And realised that all I lack

Originates in me!
