May Podcasts

This May, we are pleased to share our latest podcast series presented by Revd Jack Dunion.

Across five episodes, Jack reflects on the steady presence of the Lord in our lives, whatever we may be facing. The series has been created with particular care for those who are not always able to attend church in person. Whether through illness, distance, or simply feeling cut off, these podcasts offer a way of engaging in worship and reflection at home, at your own pace.

The themes move gently from the Lord's comfort, through the strengthening of faith, to the promise of heaven, God's presence with those who feel alone, and the hope of eternal life. Taken together, they offer a thoughtful and reassuring message about holding onto faith, even when the world around us feels uncertain.

A great deal of care has gone into how these episodes have been put together, making them easy to listen to and quietly absorbing. They are well suited for a moment of stillness in the day, or for anyone in need of encouragement.

We hope you will take some time to listen, and perhaps share the series with friends, family, or anyone who might appreciate it. A simple recommendation can go a long way in helping someone feel a little more connected and supported.

Please follow the link to explore the full series and discover a quiet sense of peace and reassurance within.
